Seven more Democratic workers have been convicted and sentenced in Cincinnati for ballot-box frauds in that city last October.

Now let the Mugwumps roar. Senator Edmunds says: "In all of my twenty years' experience in the Senate there has not been such a large number of bad appointments before the Senate for confirmation as during the last year."

The people of North Carolina have proved the truth of Senator Vance's statement that they do not believe in the civil service reform foolery by defeating Representative Cox in the nominating convention. Mr. Cox favored the law.

Mr. George William Curtis plaintively remarks in Harper's Weekly that "last year George B. Plynn (to whom Squier wrote the notorious letter) went abroad and carried, among other letters of introduction, one from President Cleveland to President Grey."

The New York Herold expresses the belief that in the campaign this fall the Republicans "will make their chief theme the sale of the President, and they will produce a tolerably rich budget. They will make him stem to stern. But we are not sure that the Democratic party will conquer itself much about that."

The President has disappointed Matthews the day he was recently rejected by the Senate for the position of Register of Deeds. This action of the President has caused great dissatisfaction among the Democrats who have opposed Matthews from the first. Heretofore the President has declared that he would not reappoint men who had been rejected by the Senate, but there is usually a wide margin between his public utterances and his private acts.

It is said that Commissioner Black will be given the Austrian mission as an inducement to retire quietly from the pension office. The proposed change in the pension department has been brought about by Secretary Lane who so skillfully disposes Black that will not speak to him except on official business and then as briefly as possible. Gov. Glick of Kansas and Gen. Siekles, of New York are mentioned as candidates for the office.

This morning we publish a list of the appointments for Republican speakers as arranged to date by the State Committee. The campaign this fall will be an aggressive one on the part of the Republicans. McBlane and some of the most influential Republicans in the country will unite their efforts with the Maine Congressional delegation so that the voters of the State will have the issues defined in clear, vigorous and eloquent language in the few weeks remaining before their decision is recorded at the polls. The eyes of the Republicans in other States are upon us for McBlane speaks first the result of our election is awaited with deep interest. Let us see to it that the returns fully meet their most sanguine expectations.

An intimate friend of the late Hubert O. Thompson declares that President Cleveland stands little chance of receiving the support of the New York Democracy in 1888. He says: "There is a great deal of dissatisfaction with Cleveland in all branches of the party, and with good cause. The County Democracy under Mr. Thompson's lead nominated him for President, but he refused to appoint Thompson as Collector of the port of New York. We think his course was cowardly and ungracious. Cleveland cannot get the delegation from New York State in 1888, and even if he should succeed in that he would not receive the support of the voters. The County Democracy is alienated from him and is now in open warfare against him. Governor Hill is the coming man. There will be an effort made this coming fall to secure what we have had in New York for fifteen years, namely, a united Democracy. Governor Hill has the power to bring this about. All obstacles to his ambition have been removed and he possesses the skill, management and ability to secure the next convention. The coast seems, indeed, very clear for Hill as far as his own State is concerned. He possesses to a greater extent than any other man in New York the knowledge and experience of a patriotic

Captain Van model, whom the Republicans have nominated for Congress against Judge Holmes, in the Fourth District of Indiana, is a lawyer of fine abilities, an effective public speaker and an officer of the Grand Army, whose reputation in San Francisco is now pending. His nomination is confessedly the best that could have been made and the Republicans of this district feel confident that if he will run he will defeat Mr. Holman.

As long as Hubert O. Thompson was an active figure in New York politics Collette Hodder was secure in his office, but before the leader of the County Democracy was fairly buried his representative in the Custom House was required to resign, and yesterday the President appointed his successor in the person of Daniel Magraw of Ogdensburg, New York, who was a member of the Canal Commission under Gov. Tilden. No doubt the Mugwump papers will see a splendid vindication of reform in this change, but the President has delayed acting too long. It has been known all about the abuse practiced by Mr. Hodder for months past, and had he simply desired to reform the office I would have removed the Collector long ago.

Many leading Democrats do not regard the record of the last Democratic House as likely to help the party in the fall campaign. Mr. Hewitt, for instance, declares that it has been a "failure" with a big "if." Mr. Holman is very much disturbed at the extravagant appropriations, and views the President's course in vetoing small pension bills with alarm. The fact that more new offices, with salaries attached, were created by the last House than in any previous House since the war, does not accord with Mr. Holman's idea of a prompt fulfillment of the Democratic pledges to reduce the expenses of the Government. In this, as well as in other respects, the people have learned that it will not do to place reliance upon Democratic promises.

Another gallant soldier, Al. H. Rainey, Register of Wills, has had to walk the plank for the crime of being a Republican. He served all through the war, was promoted in the field for gallant conduct at Gettysburg, was once left on the field for dead, and is today a great sufferer from the effects of wounds received during the fight. He is even the author of a history of Peter the Great, concerning which one is tempted to wonder whether it is based upon "very strong impressions" or upon facts.

Very probably he will be ready now with his promised apology to Mr. Washburn, but this will not save the minister which has been done by the wide and repeated circulation of this false charge. Neither, we may add, will it rehabilitate the character of Mr. Eugene Schuyler as an historian. A man who will print "in what purports to be history a great accusation against a public man when the examination of a week's file of a newspaper would have proved the accusation false would be a clever writer or a gaudy essayist, but he is not an historian. The habit of relying upon "very strong impressions" instead of "sobering up" to ascertain facts is very prevalent among writers for Mugwump newspapers, but Mr. Schuyler is, so far as we know, the first person who has undertaken to write history in that way.

The Administration is rapidly learning what the old veterans think of the treatment they are receiving at Washington, and their condemnation will be emphasized at the polls. Here is what an Illinois veteran says: "I am a member of the state regulation and whose pension of $12 a month was cut down to four dollars by Comptroller Black, while drawing for himself a pension of $100 a month a widow of less than $6,000 a year from the government writes:

"My original pension was granted for disabled service in the Civil War in 1863 under Gen. Grant. It seems to me small business for a government preserved by the efforts of its soldiers to insult me in this manner. This does the Administration continue to manifest its hostility to the brave men who sacrificed everything for the old flag. Let the Maine veterans remember these facts when they go to the polls this fall to pass their verdict on the first year and a half of the occupatic rule.
